

Back in 1989 when I was dragged kicking and screaming into the computer age, I found the computer 'experts' considered themselves to be elitists.

They talked in strange jargon and made out that they were rocket scientists, and I (the customer) was a dumbo.

These people still exist.

After being taken in for a while with several of these Nerds, I discovered P C Patch by way of a referral.

Computer technology is just another trade, along the lines of an up-to-date Mechanic fixing your high-tech Volvo or your late model washing machine.

P C Patch do not pretend.

They will not talk down to you, but will give you straight up no-nonsense advise and service.

My business relies entirely on P C Patch to keep me up and running, they have never let me down, they also look after my home computers and personal Tablets.
